The announcement of the engagement of young Mr. de Navarro to Mary Anderpon was first made in these columns New Year's Day. Miss Anderson was then at Nice with her mother and stepfather. Jose F de Navarro, father of Antonio, professed utter ignorance of the engagement at that time. There has been time since for correspondence between father and son, apparently.

Antonio was an usher at the wedding of Joseph Anderson to the daughter of Lawrence Barrett, last Spring: and when his health gave out, his mother decided that the climate in the near neighborhood of Miss Anderson's hotel would be more beneficial to him than all the philtres of Esculapius.

So for many months these two have been in each other's company at London. Nice, San Remo and other European places.

Miss Anderson has been the cause of much heari-burning among susceptible young Americans, and has been subject to much snnoyance from male cranks who fell passionately in love with her from the orchestra circle, and female cranks who were confirmed in the belief that the actress had steeled the hearts of their natural adorers against them.

On Miss Anderson's last appearance in New York Inspector Byrnes arrested James M. Dougherty, a love-stricken crank from the interior, who was on the watch for his heart's enslaver with a revolver wherewith to enforce his supplication for her hand.

This was only one of several similar incidents in the career of the statuesque Mary, and if rumor be true, she was the recipient of flattering matrimonial propositions from many young men of excellent family, wealth, position and respectability. The cabled congratulation of Senor de

The cabled congratulation of Senor de Navarro to his son, however, ends speculation and reveals the true inwardness of her ampouncement that she "should not appear in 'The Tempest,' nor in any other play for an indefinite period."

An EVENING WORLD reporter, calling today usen Senor Jose F. de Navarro at his Broadway office, was told by Miss Anderson's happy prospective father-in-law that the reported engagement of his son was possible.

the reported engagement of his son was possible.

"They are together, at present, at San Remo." said Mr. de Nararro. "They have long been great friends, and Miss Anderson, when in New York, is a frequent visitor at our house, where she is much beloved.

"I know she thinks much of Antonio who is thirty years old—so much that she has pursued a custom of asking his criticiants and suggestions on her every new production, inviting him to her rehearsals for that purpose, and almost invariably adopting his suggestions. He has not always been a flatterer, either.

"Have you, as reported, Mr. de Nawarro, cabled your congratulations to your son upon his engagement?" asked the reporter.

"I send cable despatches" he answered evasively.
